In the scope of STeP EcoLab Mongolia project funded by the European Union, a handbook of environmentally friendly, sustainable production for Mongolian Wool and Cashmere industry is published and ready to be delivered to the hands of managements, engineers and technical workers of the sector.

In this handbook, not only best practices of introducing sustainability to the wool and cashmere industry, but also included main processing technologies. This book is distinct as it is the first ever guideline to introducing sustainable production and consumption to Mongolian wool and cashmere subsector.

Chapters on general concepts of sustainability are written by Collaboration Centre on Sustainable Consumption and Production /CSCP/ team based in Germany, spinning quality and technology chapter is developed by Sc.D, Professor Enkhtuya.D, Ph.d Shinenemekh.V wrote chapters for wet processing technology and chemical usage, the head of Water Research Institute, Ph.D Basandorj.D drafted the technology for waste-water treatment, and lastly, Ph.D Dorjpurev.J, Mongolian Accredited Energy Auditor, developed the energy efficiency chapter.

A team of experts of their respective fields collaborated and created this handbook based on the results of previous studies run by the STeP EcoLab project and common international best practices. The creators of this handbook hope it will become a standard desk-top reference for all wool and cashmere sector workers, enabling them to learn about sustainable production in their native language.
